As we have done for the past twelve years, the Retail and Commercial Development Group of Cox, Castle & Nicholson LLP has, once again, taken on the challenging task of forecasting what to expect in the forthcoming year in four critical segments that affect the retail and office industries. In doing so, we analyzed the global health, social, political and economic events of 2020, reviewed various economic data and projections and have come to certain opinions relating to the retail and office industries and where they are heading in 2021. Included here is the product of our thinking, in the form of four articles of interest addressing such topics as capital markets, retailing, retail development, and office leasing.
